INTRODUCTION

Abertay’s new Strategic Plan has been written for the Abertay community – for those who belong to it now, and for those who might join us in the future. Of course, it is also intended for friends of the University, for prospective collaborators, and for others who have an interest in what we do. It describes what sort of university we are, and will guide us as we develop as an institution.

The plan begins with a statement of our Purpose – our own understanding of what we are about as a university. As you will see, this amounts to a commitment to provide transformational opportunities, to helping all in the Abertay community - students, staff and graduates - to achieve their potential, and to have a positive impact on the world around us. We then go on to identify a set of Principles, consistent with the Purpose, that will guide our work over the next five years and beyond. From the Principles flow, in turn, aims and ways of measuring progress towards achieving those aims.

This Strategic Plan will guide the action we take over the next five years. It will also, by implication, help us to determine what we choose not to do; good strategy, after all, makes some choices less natural, as well as encouraging others. We also hope that our Purpose and the Principles, rooted as they are in our understanding of ourselves as a community, will guide the development of the University in the longer term, beyond 2020.

Of course, as our plan looks forward, it also builds on the past. Our values as an institution, which were so important in helping us to articulate our Purpose, reflect our focus on student learning, an emphasis on preparing students for the world of work, and a strong sense of social mission. We inherit all these from the foundation of our predecessor institution, the Dundee Technical Institute, in 1888. We build on excellence in a range of academic disciplines, as well as in the provision of support services, and on a history of innovation throughout our history – most prominently, of course, being the first university anywhere to introduce Computer Games as an academic discipline.

This Strategic Plan is necessarily a reference work, to be pulled out and consulted as we work through the next five years and beyond. But it is also intended to tell a story, connecting the Purpose, Principles and Aims with the life of the University, and I hope you will find it worthwhile to read it in that way.

Finally, I would like to make a few comments on how the Strategic Plan was developed. This was a work of partnership, involving students, colleagues, members of Senate and the University Court, our governing body. Following a scenario planning exercise in early 2014, we engaged with various groups over the course of the year, establishing a clear picture of what is important to the Abertay community as we look to the future. The development of the Strategic Plan was also informed by discussions around key supporting strategies, in Teaching and Learning Enhancement, Research and Knowledge Exchange, Estates, and Internationalisation.

It has been a privilege for me, as Principal, to work with the Abertay community on developing the Strategic Plan 2015–2020, and I look forward to leading the University in its implementation.
