

CALL FOR ABSTRACTS: Challenging and Changing Institutional Abuses of Power

Friday 3rd May 2019

BSA Early Career Forum Regional Event

Abertay University, Dundee, Scotland

Abuses of power are central to the way that organisations and institutions in society function, with power often used to construct and control certain social groups. Whilst institutional and organisational abuses of power are by no means new phenomena, in recent years we have seen growing public awareness, concerns, and challenges to such institutional abuses of power through various social movements such as the #MeToo movement, the Black Lives Matter movement, Justice for Grenfell campaigns, and a constant stream of mediated stories from survivors of abuse in sporting, religious, and political institutions in particular. Harm to individuals and particular social groups is supported and reinforced by institutional frameworks.

This event aims to draw on examples of unequal and harmful power dynamics that result in various forms of abuse across different organisational and institutional spaces and highlights the strategies being utilised to challenge them. By not limiting the event to the institutional abuses of one specific institution, we hope to draw out the similarities and differences in the conditions, behaviours, relations, and actions that facilitate abuses of power across multiple institutions and in relation to a range of social groups and abuses. In doing so, we aim to drive discussions towards opportunities and strategies for challenging such abuses.

Confirmed keynote speakers are Dr Maddie Breeze (Education and Sociology, University of Strathclyde), Prof Steve Tombs (Criminology, Open University) and Prof Jessica Ringrose (Education and Sociology, University College London)

We are seeking abstracts for paper presentations that engage with challenging and changing institutional abuses of power.

- Institutions can include but are not limited to: universities; law and the justice system; sport; the entertainment industry; places of employment; religious establishments; state and local level governance; and corporations.
- Abuses of power include, but are not limited to: physical and mental harm; indirect or direct discrimination and oppression based on identity and intersections of identities; negligence and malpractice; sexual abuse; and epistemic violence.

Please send abstracts of no more than 200 words to Ashley Rogers (a.rogers@abertay.ac.uk) by March 22nd 2019. There are a few travel bursaries available. Please note in your email if you would like to claim a travel bursary.

Registration fees: BSA members £5. Non-BSA members £15

Ashley Rogers
Adam Talbot
Chloe Maclean